Dear Mr. Farrell,

Over the years I have considered myself somewhat of a risk taker and have always narrowed that risk by due diligence research. Several years ago I was having a discussion with Mr. Jack Koehler of Paul Koehler Engineers of Scottsdale Arizona. I had told Jack that I needed some design ideas that would not only save time but would also save money for our upcoming project in Walnut Creek California. Jack suggested I look into "GEO PIERS" as an alternate to driven piles. I did just that. I did my due diligence and I liked what I saw. I directed Jack to begin the Design of our new Renaissance ClubSport Hotel with GEO PIERS as the foundation.

As you know we are now topped out on the concrete structure and moving rapidly towards an early fall completion date on top of GEO PIERS, installed by your firm.

I have seldom been more pleased with a final outcome than I am with GEO PIERS. This foundation system met every one of my expectations. You were very professional, timely and you filled all of your commitments, as promised.

I will use your company and GEO PIERS whenever possible in the future. We did not get one single complaint from neighbors while you were installing your work. That, in itself, was worth the time and effort I spent getting to know your product. Although you worked for Hensel Phelps Construction Company I was always in the background watching with great interest to see if my desire to solve problems had a pay day. It did. Good job, look forward to future work.

As always,
